Presenting at the NSW Cancer Conference was a wonderful chance to share my research on psycho-oncology telehealth recommendations with colleagues across a broad range of disciplines, which will be beneficial in eventually disseminating my research to a wider audience.

A highlight of the conference was the consumers workshop. Lucy Jones was a brilliant small-group leader, and facilitated an extremely useful conversation about how to pitch research at an appropriate level for consumers. In my current role I am in the process of expanding our community advisory group, and have directly incorporated some of the feedback I received during this session into our planning moving forward.

Overall I found the conference a really enjoyable experience, and met a number of people on the day – and have since been introduced to several more – with whom collaborations may develop.

A big thank you to Sydney Cancer Partners for the registration support and for the opportunity to be a part of such a fantastic conference.
